For both a milk and butter record this heifer will stand very high, and when you combine milk, butter and beef the Holsteins are certainly hard to beat. Mr. Radford has a fine herd, and it is well worth a trip to his place to see these fine cows.

George W. Gibson's Trial.

The case of the Commonwealth against Geo. W. Gibson, charged with the murder of John McCarthy in John Yancy's saloon, at Fairview, March 31st, 1884, was resumed this morning. The testimony introduced in the trial is so contradictory that it is almost impossible to arrive at a clear statement of the facts of the case. The evidence introduced by the Commonwealth will, however, warrant the following statement: John McCarthy was an Irishman, who for some time previous to his death, was employed on the farm of Logan Boyd. Before being employed by Boyd he had been a peddler and sold his goods throughout the section of country around about Fairview. On March 31st, 1884, he went with Boyd in a wagon to Fairview. Early in the morning he became very drunk. While in Yancy's saloon he became involved in a quarrel with Geo. Gibson, Gibson displayed a knife, and Yancy, fearing a serious difficulty, put him out and requested Boyd to take McCarthy home, as he was very drunk. Boyd led McCarthy out but in a few minutes the latter returned in company with a man named Latham. While McCarthy was standing in the front room of the store, at this time very drunk, Geo. Gibson entered the front door of the store and at the same time Nick Gibson, his brother, came in at the back door. Geo. Gibson immediately renewed the quarrel, and the poor drunken man showing fight, he knocked him down. Nick then appeared on the scene and tried to force Geo. Gibson out the back way. By this time McCarthy had arisen, and Geo. Gibson directed him without effort. Nick still continued to push his brother back until at last he got him into the back room near the door in the rear of the house. McCarthy then staggered into the back room, presumably to get a drink, and Gibson fired the fatal shot and the poor man fell and fell and expired in a few minutes. Gibson then took to his heels and left for parts unknown, nor was he heard of again until last fall, when Marshal Patterson, of Elkton, arrested him in Daviess county and brought him to this city where he has been in jail ever since.

The witnesses for the defense tell an entirely different story in their testimony. From out the tangled statements of a number of them we gather the following: McCarthy was rather a chivalrous gentleman with warm attachments. Hearing that Geo. Gibson had started certain slanderous reports about him, he determined to vindicate his fair name by killing the man who cast such aspersions on him. On the day preceding the killing, he told one man that he had a "settlement" to make with George William Gibson for slandering him. On the morning of the killing he told another witness he was hunting for Gibson and was going to "cut his race short." When they met in the saloon, McCarthy made a mad dash at Gibson, and the latter to defend himself drew his pistol and fired but missed his assailant. Then Nick came forward to take his brother out of harm's way and succeeded in getting him to the back door of the saloon, when McCarthy came "cowardly" on him again, and he fired, this time bringing down his man. It was also in testimony that McCarthy was armed with a large rock when he attacked Gibson. Our readers can take the two stories for what they are worth and make up their minds accordingly. We have no opinion to express for or against the accused, as the case rests in the hands of the jury, which will give him justice.

The prisoner is a young man of rather pleasing appearance. His complexion is as fair as a woman's. His hands are long and slender with tapering fingers and look unused to labor. He has a brown eye, protruding lips, a prominent nose and a head well filled out with the exception of his forehead which is low and retiring. During the trial he has conducted himself with the utmost composure, and only a few times has he seemed to take more than an ordinary interest in the case.

The able Commonwealth Attorney, Mr. Garnett, is assisted by Mr. E. G. Seabree and Col. M. D. Brown, of Fairview. The defense was skillfully conducted by Messrs. Henry and Payne and Johnson.

A gentleman in this city triumphantly relates that his baby, now thirteen weeks old, has never been known to cry. This is a wonderful record, and the child must be saving its reserve force for some future day.

Rev. C. H. Strickland, of Nashville, will preach the annual sermon before the young ladies of Bethel Female College next June. Dr. Strickland is one of the most accomplished orators in his denomination.

Just received a fine lot of stylish spring goods, which I am going to sell at bottom prices. Gents' clothing and ladies' furnishings goods in all styles. Call and examine my goods and you will purchase.

C. P. Nolan & Co. come to the front to-day with an advertisement. They are live business men and offer special inducements in their lines. They will be found on the West side of 7th street, below the New Era office. When in the city call on them whether you wish to purchase or not.

Mr. John W. Cooper, agent for the Southern Mutual Life Insurance Company, showed us a letter yesterday in which Col. L. G. Thuston, Secretary of the Company, presented to Mrs. Cooper a $5,000 twenty-year's payment life policy because of the energy and zeal of her husband in behalf of his Company.

Those enterprising merchant tailors, N. Tobin & Co., corner 5th and Main streets, have now a very large stock of suitings, etc., brought very low. We advise our male readers to give them a call if they want to see something nice and stylish. No gentleman who takes a pride in having his clothing of the best fabric, latest cut, and made up in a substantial manner, can be better pleased than to call on N. Tobin & Co.

A gentleman from Lexington, was in the city yesterday and reported everything as quiet at the mines. He thinks the St. Bernard men are not disposed to create a disturbance but the Hecla men are ready for trouble. The discharged miners have been notified that they will be expected to vacate their houses in a few days, and when the attempt is made to eject them, it is rumored there will be lively times.

Farmers, except those summoned by law, or necessity which knows no law, have kept out of town this week. They have better employment at home polishing their plows, shares in the mellow earth, and scattering seeds and clover seed. The farmer's strikes always pay.

They bring bread and meat instead of famine and poverty. So here is a double health to farmers, and may their shadows never grow less and their substance always increase.

The "Horse Shoe Brand" Tobacco Grover stands without a rival as to quality, price and mechanical condition. It furnishes food for the plant from the beginning of the crop to its maturity. It makes tobacco that cures easily and uniformly. No spotting. It largely increases the yield. The color and texture market price. Our best farmers know these facts and are buying this brand in preference to any other.

Society in the town of Trenton, Ky., is wrought up to a high pitch of indignation and excitement. The cause of this is the cruel and inhuman treatment received by a young wife at the hands of her husband. Both are highly connected and such was the state of public feeling over the outrage that the latter has disappeared from the community, after being roughly handled by the relatives and friends of the abused wife. Whiskey, we are told, is responsible for the mischief.—Clarksville Times-Led.

Our Boys at Greenwood.

Company D, of Hopkinsville, reached the wilds of Greenwood Sunday morning at six o'clock, with Company A, of Bowling Green, eighty-four men in all, are now on guard. It is to be hoped that the young guards, who have been so suddenly called into camp, will have nothing more serious to do till they return home than to watch the bursting of the sugar-tree buds on the hills of Pulaski.
